Wine tastings and pairings have been so overdone to the point of being passé. Au courant beverage aficionados have now started turning to other spirits and liqueurs to pair with a variety of foods, such as Sake. If your idea of Sake is solely something to be drunk out of dollhouse-sized cups while scarfing down a California Roll at your neighborhood sushi bar like tequila shots and tacos on Cinco de Mayo, then Morgan Hartman wants to talk to you. As a member of a community of less than one hundred certified Level II Sake Specialists in the world, Hartman is making it her passion to educate Westerners about Japan's signature alcoholic beverage, which is quickly becoming recognized as being on par with grape wines in sophistication and maybe even surpassing them in versatility. On October 6th, be prepared to be schooled on the intricacies of Sake by Hartman, herself, at Sake at Sundown, hosted

The event, whose proceeds will benefit United Way Miami-Dade's various local projects in education, financial stability, and health, will be held at Wynwood Kitchen & Bar located in Miami's arts district and one of the coolest neighborhoods in South Florida. A formal sit-down tasting, guests will sample three distinct Sakes that will be masterfully paired with dishes from Chef Miguel Aguilar's new Latin-inspired menu. Diners will also get to stroll among Wynwood Kitchen & Bar's open-air art park. What better way to spend a Thursday evening than with great food, premium Sakes curated by an expert, a chic ambiance, and the knowledge that your unforgettable evening is helping a worthy cause? I'm at a loss to find anything remotely comparable!
